Subject: Letter of Recommendation

I hereby recommend Oghenetega Adogbeji for admission into your PhD program in Computer Science. I have known Oghenetega for three years and three months since he joined this company, Globacom Nigeria Ltd (One of Nigeria's largest Telecommunications Service provider) where he is currently working as Data Engineer.

Oghenetega is very industrious and it reflects in the company entrusting him with a senior position after his first year of joining. He was first employed as a Network Service Engineer where he worked for one year and was responsible for various network activities such as; Network Optimization, Traffic Analysis, routine maintenance, configurations and troubleshooting of various BSS network equipments. During one of the company's regular restructuring phase to improve the efficiency of the network, he was drafted into the Data department owing to his high KPI from the role he was first assigned. He was faced with various tasks in this new role among them being Data analysis, packet loss detection and resolution in NodeBs. Without surprise, the Data arm of the region he was assigned began to experience major improvements within his first three months of work. Among his hallmarks are workplace discipline and punctuality.

In order to stay up-to-date in the industry and possess knowledge that makes him globally competent, Oghenetega prides himself with reading various newsletters such as those from IEEE on these subjects. To further his knowledge and prepare for grad school work, he makes out time to read journals on various interesting topics like the Data Science, Internet Of Things, Network Security, Artificial Intelligence and Robotics. He also creates time for taking standard online courses. As a result of these actions, during the regular monthly meetings in the company, his impact and incisive contributions are always felt. I was not surprised to find out that before joining this company he took the well-known Cisco certification exams on computer networking and excelled at it.

Furthermore, Oghenetega ensures to maintain a healthy work-life balance by initiating hangouts among work colleagues and ensures to keep as many people in mind as possible. He has great public speaking skills, teamwork skills, and leadership skills. Having worked in the same team with him various times, I have noticed that he seldom complains about how the work is going but prefers to make known his concerns as tactfully as the situation permits in order to promote a healthy work atmosphere.

I was very happy when I learned of his intention to further his studies by undertaking a Postgraduate degree as that would definitely satisfy his hunger for research that would easily be identified by engaging with him in technical discussions. Also, I have identified that he has the passion to teach and has the skills to break down intricate concepts to the understanding of even a layman.

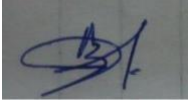

It is for these reasons that I recommend him for admission without reservations into this prestigious school. I believe he will be an asset to this school. I would also like to recommend him for assistantship positions, funding offers and scholarships.
